17. Case Study :

The case is about the challenges faced by Vyasa Bank Limited, once the most valuable Indian banking and financial services company by market capitalization. Started in 2001 as a not-for-profit enterprise that stood for financial inclusion and women empowerment, Vyasa turned into an NBFC and a few years later transformed itself into a universal bank. Vyasa commenced its banking operations and joined the league of big banks in August 2015. Its unique business structure focuses on serving under-banked and under-penetrated markets in India with its offerings of a variety of asset and liability products and services. Vyasa remained a strong compounding story given its potential to play on the vast rural opportunity, best operating metrics, and robust capital base. In less than three years of operation, the bank went public to meet regulatory compliance and priced its issue four times the book value. This made the bank's valuation more expensive than established Indian banking peers. Within five months of its public listing, Vyasa Bank's sharp jump on the stock market made it the costliest banking stock in the sector in terms of price-to-book value ratio. After meeting the regulatory mandate of public listing, Vyasa Bank has been struggling to comply with the licensing requirement of bringing down promoter holding in the bank. India's central bank, the Reserve Bank of India, imposed strictures on Vyasa Bank for failing to reduce promoter shareholding. The RBI decision has left the stakeholders apprehensive and affected the shares of the bank, which have plunged to their lowest, since its market debut in March 2018. Notwithstanding the bank's scale of operation, enviable track record in micro loans, and future business potentials, expensive valuation was the key issue for the bank. The bank was also vulnerable to the risks associated with its geographical concentration, micro-lending focus, asset quality deterioration, and asset-liability mismatch.

Question :

Discuss the transition from Vyasa Bank, a microfinance institution (MFI) to a relationship based responsible lender in the Indian banking system.
